2021 was our guild's 30th birthday. That year our challenge was to do something related to "30" and include at least one pearl (the gem associated with 30th anniversary). I chose to do an undersea scene with 30 fish and lots of pearl "bubbles".

My friend, Renee, called and asked if I would make her a memory quilt from her mother's nighties. She had previously been told no by two other quilters who said that due to the nature of the fabrics, it could not be done. Not one to back away from a challenge and having plenty of experience making clothes with knit fabrics, I was not concerned. She also requested a favorite sweater to be added to the mix. That border was something else. There were light, medium, and heavy stretch fabrics involved and they all stretched at different rates and different directions. Yikes! Finally I figured out that if I used Washable School Glue to hold the pieces in place to sew them it was far more accurate than with pins. Whew! We were both very pleased with the outcome.

My four-year-old grandson loves to help design quilts with me and watch me put them together; especially when I let him push the thread cutter button. His favorite color is red so that is in most quilts he helps me with. This one has fabrics with a bunch of our favorite foods so we call it The Yummy Quilt. My favorite quote from him happened the first day I was demonstrating how a sewing machine works. "Wow, Nana! It's just like a little jackhammer! This is the first binding I have done with inside and outside corners. So glad I figured out how to do that. After it was finished, I removed the last two squares on the bottom corners. It looked great with those squares on - just laying flat - but to hang right on the bed, they needed to come off.
