This reminded me of steering wheels, hence the name. It was created in a workshop with Louisa Smith - Strips & Curves. Started in 2008, quilted and finished in 2020. It took a 1st place at the Sauder Village Quilt Show that year.

I call this my blessings quilt because of the scripture that is in a panel and cut to incorporate them in the blocks. I bought the kit in Tennessee and thought of a lot of memories from my trip while stitching it. It has four different borders and fits well on my full size guest bed. I really like how these colors blend.

I attended a guild retreat in January 2022 at the Artistry on Evans in Tecumseh, MI. The theme was snowflakes and thus our retreat challenge quilt. I chose two shades of blue with snowflake prints and white on white snowflakes for background. The saw-tooth stars for border are with blue grunge and also the white on white. I did a flange binding on this because I prefer machine binding over hand sewing.

This applique was a Block of the Month from Buttermilk Basin. There were a lot of different stitches and tiny pieces to put in each house to make up the different seasons. It was very challenging in that I chose not to use a hoop and then getting everything symmetrical. It has three borders and a diamond block in all four corners with a flange binding.

This piece is my first attempt at a mini quilt. It was so fun to make! I cut, sewed, and quilted it all in one day! It is a churn dash pattern on point with two borders. This was totally stitched on my 1940 Singer Featherweight.

The inspiration for this came to me while at work. I drew it up on a yellow sticky note. The quilt was for our 2018-2019 Guild Challenge - Songs from the 1960s. I chose: 1964 "I Want to Hold Your Hand" by the Beatles. It was my first challenge quilt and I placed 5th.

This is the piece that I had created during Jan Rochefort's workshop, Sunset Beach Scene. We had picked our fabric from the kit that was prepared and decided on the fabric placement ourselves. Creating the scenery with the Japanese white birch and the sunset over the ocean was really easy and the end result turned out very well so I would like to apply the technique to create other sceneries.

This is the piece that I had made during Doris Larson's workshop, Pounding Flowers. The color transfer changed depending on the plants that were used in the process and controlling the strength while hammering them down was difficult, but it was fun to experiment with the method that sustained the natural shape of the flowers. We used Intense Pencil to outline and to help keep the vibrancy of the colors

This piece was designed during Cheryl Lynch's Mini Mosaic workshop. Extremely small pieces of fabric were placed using tweezers and quilt was added over a tulle as the last step. The process tired my eyes, but I love the design of Singer's antique sewing machine?

Diamonds From Grandmother's Flower Garden

Unknown

Designed By: Unknown

Quilted By: Unknown

Hand Pieced, Appliqued, Embroidered and Quilted

This beautiful antique quilt is a variation of the traditional Grandmother's Flower Garden which is made of hexagons alone arranged in circular flowers. This arrangement places the hexagon into a diamond shape and then uses dramatic red diamond pieces to further continue the diamond pattern. In addition to seeing the diamond shape, you can also see six-pointed stars and cubes. Another unique feature in this quilt is the curved bottom covers. Look closely at the top edge of the quilt and now made a guess about why this edge was referred to as the whisker edge.
