Anna Pedrotte
Here are a few pictures of a quilt I just finished for my great niece

LuAnn Hammond

I made 28 of the Charm Baskets for Christmas gifts, (2 are not in this picture). No two were the same, and I have a few extras for the Quilt Show's General Store.

Amy Richardson

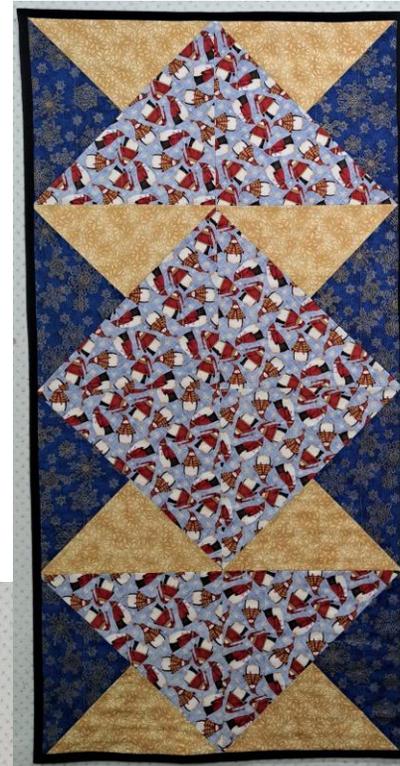

My first flange binding. It was a good suggestion from my fellow sewers at January sew camp. I was surprised how easy it was to do. Quilt is for a girlfriend's first grandbaby. It's a boy.

Reversible pieced table mats.
Seemed like a good idea, but getting both sides lined up evenly was a little difficult. I may just stick with a solid backing from now on.

No new fabrics were purchased for these projects. All sewing and quilting done by me on my domestic machines.

Karen Beers

Two original design Doll Quilts for Granddaughter Emma. She has 2 18" dolls with bunkbeds that we bought for her 5th birthday. They are made from scraps and fabrics from prior projects for my granddaughters. I remembered to put "Grandma Loves You" label on. Quilted with edge to edge design on my embroidery machine.

Glo & Go Wrap by Annie Made for Granddaughter
Kate out of Taylor Swift inspired fabric.

When this fabric line came out, I knew my “Swiftie” granddaughter would like to have something made out of it. She’ll be 10 next week. She picked the Glo & Go for her makeup and the Travel Duffle for sleep overs with friends. (The duffle is the next project to tackle.)

Sandy Knibloe

My block of the month all finished and ready to quilt. This is from the Quilt Patch. And the first time I have ever finished a block of the month. Very happy how it turned out.

Dog themed hot pad made out of previously started projects

Tool pouch made from free pattern.

Charity quilt also worked on during Day Camp.

Becky Kopicko

This is a quilt that tells the story of the book “Brown bear, brown bear. What do you see?” The front pictures tell the story and on the back you see the children. This book is a big hit with preschool through elementary age kids.
